

How to Create a Medical ID on Your Android Phone

1. Open the Settings menu
2. Go to the Safety and Emergency section
3. Select Medical Information
4. Enter health information like your date of birth, allergies, and blood type.
5. To make your Medical ID available from the Lock screen on your iPhone, turn on Allow Access to Emergency Info.

Emergency contacts can be added in the Emergency Contacts section of the Safety and Emergency Settings menu.

If your phone has the Health app installed, you may enter emergency information there or you may download a free Medical ID app from Google Play Store.

Set up your profile: When you first open the Health app, you'll likely be prompted to set up your profile. Provide the necessary information, including your name, age, gender, and any medical conditions or allergies you want to include.

Access the emergency information section: Look for an option within the Health app that allows you to enter emergency information or medical ID. The specific location and naming may vary depending on the phone's manufacturer or the version of Android you're using.

Enter your medical information & then add emergency contacts: In the same section, you should have the option to add emergency contacts. These are individuals you would like to be notified or contacted in case of an emergency. Include their names, phone numbers, and any other relevant details.

Save your changes: After entering your medical information and emergency contacts, look for a "Save" or "Done" button to save your changes. This ensures that your information is stored and accessible when needed.

Test the accessibility: To ensure everything is set up correctly, try locking your phone and accessing the emergency information or medical ID from the lock screen. Different Android versions and devices may have slightly different methods to access this information, but it usually involves swiping or tapping a specific area on the lock screen.

Note: The exact steps and features may vary depending on the Android version, phone model, and any customizations made by the manufacturer.
